How I Learned to Read and Write: Personal Experience

Since I first arrived in the US and I flourished my skills for the language English and I learned to read and write. The first book I read was a comic book and ever since that day I have loved comics. I have read multiple comics over the 8 years I have been learning to sharpen my writing and reading skills. But the STAN LEE AMAZING FANTASTIC INCREDIBLE comic book hands down has to be the best comic I have read because growing up I have loved all of STAN LEE'S work like Marvel movies and comics which are related to the films. I have been watching anything related to Marvel or DC I have seen, for example like cartoons, movies and tv shows, and of course, video games. The main focus for me on this memoir is to explain STAN LEE'S lifestyle and how he came up culturally

The way stan lee grew up and how he loved reading all of the time. (As for what I read, it would be easier to say what didn't I read? Page 4). STAN LEE loved books with all types of adventures and superheroes. Stan Lee didn't have much growing up so, in conclusion, he fell in love with wanting to read and learn from the books. The neighbourhood had nothing for stan lee so of course he was basically forced to read with no friends to play with. His parents could not even have full course meals on the table, meaning the family was forced to save what they could come up with what they had, so they would have to eat hot dogs almost every day. Some way and somehow his mom and dad saved up the money to get their son stan lee a bike and he fell in love with that bike and that's how his potential to read and understand and write jumped started his career(I'll never know how they could afford it, but that bike became my best friend.pg 13)Let me explain that bike gave access to the outside world and stan lee started exploring the city with his bike and learned a lot, started to like something and found his skill and from there his life would grow and only go forward toward the light of success. Stan Lee started writing in an office and moved up to compete in the news contest and from their went even further and worked with the army by writing letters and started to produce quick and short movie clips to help the soldiers understand anything related to like guns and how to properly use them. Stan Lee just kept on growing with his career, comic after comic. Stan Lee meets lots of important people like George w bush and Hillary Clinton because of his accomplishments through his career of writing great scripts for movies or comics.
